

Feeding and swallowing difficulties (also known as dysphagia, “dis-fay-juh”) may occur in infants and children at any age.

Left untreated, these can have a negative impact on:

Respiratory health

Hydration and nutrition

Typical development

Social and emotional well-being

Speech-language pathologists (S-LPs) are key members of the care team who assess and treat dysphagia to promote safe and positive feeding and swallowing experiences.

SAC

Speech-Language &
Audiology Canada
Communicating care